The WEEKLY REGISTER: OR, UNIVERSAL JOURNAL.

LONDON, SATURDAY, August 12, 1732. NUMB. CXXII.

As the Humours of Dress in England require a continued Regulation, and are in a manner one of our national Follies, I shall make no Scruple of making an Extract now and then on such Subjects, when the Seasonableness of them is a sufficient Justification. Of this Nature is the following little Essay, which I recommend to the serious Consideration of our present Beaux, if they ever read or consider at all.

Non nisi vel cocco madida, vel murice tincta
Veste nites, & te sic dare verba putas.
MARTIAL.

DECENCY and Cleanliness in Apparel are doubtless commendable Qualities. I could almost rank them among the moral Virtues, whilst I place their Opposites, Sluttishness and Foppery, amongst the Vices. I think it is on all Hands allow'd, that one of the greatest and most binding Laws of Nature, is that which regards Society; nor do I think it possible that the Fop or Sloven can be what we deem truly sociable. The former gives us at least one plain Instance, that he regards nothing but his own Person; the latter, that he neither regards himself nor any one else.

I know not whether I ought to treat this Subject in a grave or ridiculous Manner; but I must confess, every Foppery I see, is apter to raise my Pity than my Mirth; and a fine affected Woman moves my Heart with Sorrow. For this Reason I often forbear our publick Diversions, and other Resorts of the Beau Monde; being assured that the Pleasure I can receive there, will be far outweigh'd by the Pain the vain Coxcombs of both Sexes will put me to.

When I look back upon the Histories of former Days, and see what the English were, under the Reign of a Henry and Elizabeth, I can scarce persuade myself that the present Inhabitants of this Island are their Descendants. Our Ancestors, great and glorious in the Field, gave Laws to all Europe; but our People of Fashion are fallen so low, that they are governed by every Foreign Taylor, and Milliner. To be extremely fine now, is to be extremely ridiculous; 'tis to wear a French Bag Wig and Clock-Stockings, or a Dutch Head with a plain Scarf.

As for my own Part, I'm out of all Manner of Patience, when I meet an over-grown Wretch stalking along with all the Heaviness of the dullest Englishman, yet in his Dress imitating the pert Gayety of a Frenchman. If you view him no higher than his Shoulders, you would take him for a Mealman, who has just done Work, and has not yet had Time to brush the Flower off his Coat. The Hind-Part of his Head does not ill resemble a Statue of Mercury, with a Pair of Wings fastned to his Cap; but look him in the Face, and you are soon sensible of your Mistake; he does not in the least appear like the Patron of Wit and Eloquence.

I am fully satisfied that these modern Wigs are no Manner of Ornament to the Head; I should therefore be very glad to be instructed in the Use of them; for I have not yet, upon the strictest Enquiry, been able to discover any. I have received several Epistles within this Month from Persons who to my Knowledge constantly wear them; but I can't find that, by their Assistance, their Thoughts soar, or their Imaginations fly higher than before they were possess'd of this ridiculous Aid.

I have not Vanity enough to think myself capable of reasoning or laughing the innumerable Herd of Beaux out of their Follies; the worthy Censor of Great Britain, my much honoured Predecessor, undertook the laborious Task before me, and when Admonition failed, erected a Court of Honour, and formally prosecuted every reigning Foppery; but found himself unable to suppress them.

However, I have one Comfort left, those who now slight my Advice, shall soon have their Wings clipp'd by their own Grooms and Lacquies; for according to their wonted Custom, these will soon get into the Fashion, and then their Masters will be glad to get out of it.

A waggish Lady, with whom I was the other Day in Company, would by no Means allow them the Name of Wings, but called them long Asses Ears. As she was going on in her Railing, I took her by the Hand, and led her towards the Looking-Glass, to make her observe the little Fopperies of her own Dress, and pointed out the Horns she had made with her Hair; but she, not in the least daunted at my silent Reproof turn'd full upon me, and with a Smile told me, that when Men were grown such Idiots as to take a Pride in sticking on Asses Ears behind, no Wonder the Ladies made them before.

But of all the Fops in Nature, there are none so ridiculously contemptible as the Wouldbees; Fellows admirably well described in the Fable of the Jackdaw strutting in the Peacock's Feathers. Such as these have generally excellent Judgments, for they overlook every Virtue in the Great Man's Character whom they would imitate, and ape nothing but his Foibles. Or, to speak more justly, there are several little Follies which sit easy upon a Man of distinguished Sense and Fashion, and which blended with his good Qualities, serve only as Shades to set them off; but which are intollerable in a Wretch that has no Virtue to balance them. Such an Imitator, with a great Man's about Follies him, looks something like the old Signs of an Ape in a Doublet, or a Hog in Armour. If we examine into Sir Harry Wildair's Carriage, we shall see him give himself several little Airs which are in themselves ridiculous, but which in Fact do not make him disagreeable, whilst they render the Clinchers, the Objects of our lowest Scorn and Contempt. Archer, if I remember right, hearing a scrub Fellow assume the Title of Captain, wonders the Officers of the Army don't conspire to beat all Scoundrels in Red but their own. I as much wonder, that the distinguished Beaux don't conspire to demolish every Coxcomb that does not belong to their Company. I have seen a Taylor strut along by Tom's in Scarlet Stockings and a lac'd Suit, tho' it has not been Training-Day, without being once called in Question by those who frequent that House; and a Barber, without the least Interruption, loll behind the Scenes during the whole Play, in a lac'd Hat and a full-bottom'd Wig.

Now I am got upon the Subject of awkward Imitators, I cannot forbear running into the usual Weakness of us old Men, and telling a Story which I think not very foreign to the Purpose.

Under the merry Reign of King Charles the IId. a young rich Beau bought a Country Seat in a certain County of England: In the same Neighbourhood lived a Country 'Squire, who had never seen any Part of the fashionable World; but who, upon this Gentleman's coming down amongst them, begun to study his Airs and Manners, and must needs set up for a Beau and Gallant; instead of the sober Life he led before, he turned Debauchee, got drunk twice a Day, wench'd, bragg'd of Claps, and would needs be thought a fine Gentleman; but the rustick Air that was born and cherished in him, could never be shaken off, and his forced Gaiety made him appear ten Times more a Clown than ever. The Gentleman, whose Vices he so earnestly endeavoured to copy, observed him, and was willing to cure him of his Folly. In order to this, he desired him to bear him Company to the next Market-Town, where a famous Mountebank had lately erected a Stage. When the Doctor had sufficiently harangu'd the People, and sold off a tolerable Number of his infallible Packets, the Tumbler began to shew his Art, and by his Agility very much surprized the Spectators. Merry Andrew on the other Side, diverted them extremely, by his awkward Attempts to walk on his Hands, or fling himself over on his Legs. Observe those People, Sir, said the Beau to his Companion; that Tumbler you see is a very clever Fellow, and an entire Master of his Art, whilst that heavy Looby, in the Party-colour'd Jacket, by pretending to imitate him, makes a Fool of himself, and is the standing Jest of the Company.

On KNOWLEDGE.

KNowledge, like Phœbus, the vast Globe surveys,
And thro' all Nations spreads her useful Rays;
He beams we to our Souls a Comfort find,
And more, or less, they lighten all Mankind;
Who most enjoys her proves himself most bless'd,
For Knowledge is of all that's good possess'd.
By her we can instructively dispute,
And without her are level'd with the Brute;
In various Ways she supports ev'ry Thing,
And is of all we learn the Source and Spring.
Knowledge all Sciences and Arts reveals,
And from the Studious nothing she conceals;
With solid Pleasures she rewards their Pains,
Adorns their searching Souls, and swells their Gains.
As glorious Titan's Light and Heat improve,
The Blessings Heaven bestows, and Ills remove.
So Knowledge with a pow'rful Influence,
Does Blessings numberless thro' Earth dispense;
With sweet Variety her Beauties shine,
And charm the Scholar, Statesman, and Divine.
Without her Aid their Parts they cou'd not boast,
Nor form those valu'd Works much Labour cost.
Without her the Mechanicks toil in vain,
And Artists no Perfections can attain.
In vain grave Senators, by deep Debate,
Strive to secure a Peace in Church and State:
In vain wou'd Merchants trade to foreign Realms;
In vain the careful Pilots guide their Helms;
In vain brave Chiefs for hostile Fields prepare,
Confusion reigns, if Knowledge is not there.
She is to all a Blessing, various Ways,
Worthy our Care, and everlasting Praise.
Germania's Imperator, by whose Thought
True Time by Motion to the World was taught;
His active Fancy, and aspiring Mind,
Has in this Age by Knowledge been refin'd.
Constantine, like Atlas, prop this royal Art,
Knowledge to him her choicest Gifts impart;
Succeeding Ages shall his Genius praise,
And lasting Trophies to his Mem'ry raise.

The Mock HEROES.

HARK! hark! what Sounds tremendous from afar
Rend the blue Arch, and ring the Alarms of War!
Shrill Trumpets, thund'ring Drums, in Concert join'd,
Fill with stern Horror ev'ry breathing Wind;
The Martial Din, assails my soft Retreat,
Stranger to Noise! the Muses silent Seat!
—— But see! all gay, the mimick Host appears,
In Laughter loud, to dissipate my Fears,
Tho' arm'd with Fau'chions, Buff and Bandileeers:
Eating, not Arms, to Day is all their Trade,
Real the Feast, the Fighting, Masquerade.
—— So the dull Ass, when cloath'd in Lion's Skin,
Shows terrible without, tho' calm within,
Pretends to reign the Monarch of the Wood,
And loudly brays to make his Title good;
But vain is the Pretence, the Bray as vain,
His Ears betray the Cheat, and he's an Ass again.

A Letter alſo was read of the Notice given to Mr. Naiſh of a General Court being call'd thereon, and his Anſwer thereto, together with a Memorial abſolutely denying the Charge exhibited againſt him, and declaring his Innocence, which he doubted not but he ſhould make appear, and reflecting on the Perſons that had inform'd againſt him. After which many Debates aroſe, and the Court reſolved to this Effect: That the General Court approves of the Conduct of the Court of Directors, as to their Proceedings againſt Mr. Naiſh, and recommend to them the effectual and vigorous Continuance thereof, and that they, by no Application from him, or any in his Behalf, do come to any Compoſition or Agreement with him, without the Approbation of a General Court being firſt had. The Chairman then ſignified that in Conſideration of the Misbehaviour of the Company's Servants, the Exactions of the Indian Governors, the exceſſive Running of Goods, particularly Tea, and the high Duties paid here, the Court of Directors were of Opinion, and thought it neceſſary to reduce the Dividend on the Company's Stock to 3 per Cent. for the next half Year; upon which, after conſiderable Debates, it was reſolved to poſtpone the Determination thereof to the Quarterly General Court, which is to be held in December next, becauſe the Company's Sales might then be known, which poſſibly might enable the Directors to continue the preſent Dividend of 4 per Cent. A Motion was then made, and back'd by ſeveral, to conſider of reducing the Intereſt on the Company's Bonds. A Subſcription was propos'd for circulating them, ſo as to ſave one per Cent. but Mr. Woodford aſſerting, that the ſame was contrary to Law, the Court reſolved, That the Court of Directors be impowered to receive any Scheme or Schemes tending to the Reduction of the Intereſt on their Bonds, or paying them off, and to report the ſame to the next Quarterly General Court. The Chairman then reported a Method for preventing or reſtraining private Trade, an Evil ſo miſchievous to the Proprietors, containing divers Orders to their Governors abroad, for cauſing all Goods not allow'd, to be ſeiz'd there, &c. which he hoped would put a Stop thereto, and with which the General Court ſeemed well pleaſed.

Horſham, Auguſt 8. This Day the Aſſizes for the County of Suſſex ended at this Place, where only two Felons were tried for Houſe-breaking; one of whom was found guilty of ſingle Felony, and the other acquitted; ſo that there was a Maiden Aſſizes. There were twelve Cauſes tried on the Civil Side, one of which was an Action brought againſt Sir John Shelley, Bart. for obſtructing the Paſſage of the River at Shoreham with a Dam, which was very prejudicial to ſeveral Landholders adjoining thereto. After a Trial which laſted ſeveral Hours, and a Cloud of Witneſſes produced on both Sides, the Jury brought in a Verdict for Sir John, which occaſioned Bonfires, Ringing of Bells, Illuminations, and other Demonſtrations of Joy in the Town.

Robberies. Yeſterday Morning about Five o'Clock, as William Jackſon, Eſq; was going to Marlborough, he was ſet upon by two Highwaymen well mounted and cleanly dreſſed on Hounſlow-Heath; one was on a brown Gelding, and the other on a gray Mare: They robbed the Gentleman and his Servant of a Portmanteau and his Watch, with about 19l. in Money, and made off undiſcovered. The Gentleman and his Servant had no Arms.——On Tueſday laſt Mr. Millar, a Grocer of Uxbridge, returning home, was attack'd by a ſingle Highwayman near Kenſington Gravel-Pits, who robbed him of ten Guineas, his Watch, and ſome Silver, and made off.

Commitments. An Apprentice to the Poultry-Compter, for ſtealing a Silver Watch from his Maſter.——A Woman to the ſame Place, for picking a Man's Pocket of a Silver Watch.——A Woman to Newgate, on Suſpicion of robbing the Chambers of Mr. Evans Hughes of Clifford's-Inn, a Pocket-Book being found upon her with Notes to the Value of 270l.

Laſt Wedneſday Night about Twelve o'Clock died Mr. Daniel Hays, aged about 83 Years, an eminent and wealthy Merchant of this City; it is obſervable he had been at Supper at a French Merchant's near Billiter-Square, he went home and called for a Glaſs of Water, and died immediately after drinking it.——The Lady of Sir Robert Abdy, Bart. Knight of the Shire for the County of Eſſex, at his Seat at Albyns in the ſaid County.——George Turfield, of Petersfield in the County of Hants, Eſq; died Yeſterday at his Houſe in Hanover-Square.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Oran, July 15. N. S.

THE Moors, who ſo baſely abandon'd this Place, ſeem to gather Courage, and prove very troubleſome, appearing frequently in great Parties about the Town, and doing much Miſchief with their Light Horſe, ſo that the Spaniſh Troops are like to be kept in Exerciſe. The Happy Jane, Capt. Etchingham, (a Tranſport now here) a few Days ago, by a great Sea, loſt all her Anchors, and ſtruck ſeveral Times in the Land-Waſh, but ſeveral Engliſh Maſters, &c. going on board her, with much Difficulty, got her Sails ſet, and brought her under a Spaniſh Man of War's Stern, riding her with her Hawſer; and the Day before Yeſterday Capt. Etchingham died ſuddenly. The Owner's Goodwill, Hilton; Sandwich, Rogers; Ann, Simpſon; Wallingford, Buckland; Port Merchant, Cooke; Expedition, Whitwood; Virtue, Errington; Alresbury, Parrimore; Batchelor, Ferguſon; Noble Ann, Southren; and Free-Guift, Sullivan, being all Horſe and Cattle Ships, are diſcharg'd, and paid their full Money; as is the Fame, Hampton, which is ſail'd for Newfoundland. Laſt Night the Commiſſary General order'd the Maſters of all the Tranſports on Shore, when thoſe which brought Infantry were ordered to take out of the Victualling Ships 15 Days Proviſions for the Troops which are to be carried back to Spain. Such as have Artillery on board are to remain till they receive further Orders. The New Granada, Capt. William Hannay, is made a Store-Ship.

Cadiz, July 29. N. S. The Capitana of the Flota, and two or three Merchant-Ships, are now under Sail, in order to fall down into the Offing; and the others will get out by Degrees; ſo that ſome Day this Week the whole Flota will ſail, and the N. S. de la Aſſumption y San Juan Baptiſta, alias La Britannia, Capt. Manuel Garzia de la Penna, bound for Maracaibo, will ſail with them; as alſo the Regiſter Ship for Santa Martha and Cartagena, called the N. S. de Loretto y San Franciſco Xavier. They continue to deliver the Money on the Galleons, on the following Terms, viz. Freight 1 ½; Indulto 5; Donative 7; Conſulado 2; and towards building the Cathedrals, &c. ½; in all 15 ½ per Cent. The Charges of 2 ½ per Cent. for fitting out the Man of War, which went to aſſiſt the Capitana, is not taken, having raiſed ſufficient on the Treaſure brought by the Almiranta to defray the ſame; but they go on ſo ſlowly, that it will not be compleated till after the Flota is gone, the Diſpatch of which takes up every one's Thought and Time. Several Tranſports of the Armada are diſcharged at Oran, yet others are taken up here to carry Straw, &c. and as it is talked they will go againſt Algiers. We have Advice from Maracaibo, that the N. S. del Pillar y San Antonio, Don Juan Manuel de Canas y Moſa, which ſailed from hence the 13th of October laſt, arrived the 28th of November following off their Bar, and after taking out ſome Goods to lighten her, ſhe got ſafe over, and was well in Port. A Regiſter Ship is fitting out here for Buenos Ayres, and will ſail in all this Year.

Alicant, July 30. N. S. The Spaniards have diſcharg'd ſeveral of their Tranſports, which are returned to this and other Ports. The Barbarians frequently ſkirmiſh with them (whereby they loſe a great many Men) and are reſolved to continue ſo, till ſuch Time as the Spaniards quit their Poſſeſſion of Oran. The Duke de S. Blas did not die of his Wounds till Tueſday laſt.

Paris, Auguſt 8. N. S. The Arrêt of the Parliament, whereby the written Permiſſion granted by the Pope's Nuncio to certain Perſons to read prohibited and condemned Books, is ſuppreſſed, was not publiſhed till Yeſterday, after that Miniſter had had his Audience of the King. The ſaid Permiſſion is looked upon as ſomething extraordinary and out-of-the-way here, for which Reaſon I have ſent you a Copy of it, as follows:

REYNIER of the Counts d'Elci, by the Grace of God, and of the Holy Apoſtolick See, Archbiſhop of Rhodes, and Apoſtolick Nuncio of our Holy Father Pope Clement XII. and the ſaid Holy See, to the moſt Chriſtian King.

You N. N. whoſe Piety, Learning, Prudence, and Stedfaſtneſs in the Catholick Faith, are known unto us in the Lord: We grant you Liberty, during our Pleaſure, to read and to keep by you the Books of the Hereticks, and all others contained as well in the Index Romanus, as any where elſe, in what Manner ſoever they be condemned and prohibited, excepting the Works of Charles du Moulin, the Adonis of Marini, the Works of Nicolas Machiavel, and alſo the Books treating of judicial Aſtrology; but upon this Condition, that you ſhall read the ſaid Books in private, ſo that no other Perſon ſhall either read them, or hear them read, and that you ſhall read them without Scandal or Danger, only with Deſign to examine the ſaid Books, and to refute the Errors and Hereſies contained in them: Enjoining you at the ſame Time, that if you ſhould happen to be taken ſick and in Danger of dying, you ſhall take a ſpeedy and prudential Care to prevent the ſaid Books falling into other Hands after your Death; but if any Perſon ſhould, upon Account of this Permiſſion, come to offer any Thing by way of purchaſing it, we declare the ſame to be no Effect. Given at Paris, in the Palace of our Reſidence, the 20th Day of July, 1732.

Signed,
REYNIER,
Archbiſhop of Rhodes,
Apoſt. Nuncio.

Paris, Aug. 11. N. S. Several Ships come into different Ports, tell a confuſed Story of the Defeat of the Spaniſh Soldiers in Africa, but give us neither Rhyme nor Reaſon for it; but what appears moſt probable, was a Scrap of News brought to Marſeilles on this Subject, viz. That a Detachment of the Spaniards unluckily fell into an Ambuſcade of the Moors, whereby near 300 of them were killed: This is all the Light we can at preſent get into the Matter. What we learn from Genoa, we ſhall add here; which is, That ſeveral Men of Honour from Denmark, and other Countries, were arrived there, deſigning to ſerve as Volunteers againſt the Malecontents in the Iſle of Corſica; but Peace having been trumped up between them without their Knowledge, they reſolved immediately, without any ſeeming Paſſion, to fight againſt the Africans, and accordingly embarqued on board a Felucca for Marſeilles, in order from thence to go over to the Coaſt of Barbary, and join the Spaniſh Colours; but if they chance to be diſappointed there too, the Lord then knows whither they can go to vent this idle Humour, and looſe a little bad Blood. The Genoa Letters add, that the Emperor has but ill received the Propoſition made by the Senate, deſiring him to drop the Guaranty of the Treaty of Peace between the Inhabitants of that Iſle and the Republick: On the contrary, his Imperial Majeſty will have it ſubſiſt in its utmoſt Extent; and that all that has been ſtipulated by this Treaty in favour of the Corſicans, ſhall be made good to them. To give Light to theſe Proceedings, and to prevent little, ſly, ſhuffling, crafty, dark, evaſive republican Tricks, the Emperor ſent Orders to the Prince of Wirtemberg to cauſe the whole Treaty to be printed, publiſhed and ſtuck up in all the principal Places of the ſaid Iſland, as it was drawn and ſigned with his Imperial Majeſty's Guaranty, in the moſt ſolemn Formand Manner, without regarding, or having the leaſt Attention to the Difficulties the the Genoeze Government may pretend to lie under in executing or fulfilling their Promiſes. What if ſome of their Betters have made a Trade of making and breaking of Treaties for ſome Time paſt, they will find, notwithſtanding, that they have to do with a Prince that will tie them down to their better Behaviour. The Prince of Wirtemberg, in ſhort, has executed the Emperor's Orders in the Iſland, left there three Battalions of the German Troops, and then come away to Genoa, with the Prince of Culmbach, Brother-in-law to the King of Denmark, a Volunteer under him in that War. The Regency of Genoa have made the latter a Preſent of a Diamond, worth 8 or 10,000 Livres. There is the Devil to pay ſtill between the two modern Saints, Abbé Paris and Father Girard. The Devotees of each Side are pleading and counterpleading, to ſupport the Credit of their ſuppoſed Miracles. Some Things are already come to Light, and perhaps we may live to ſee whoſe —— is blackeſt.

Hague, Aug. 15. N. S. The Fubbs Yacht is arrived at Rotterdam, having brought over the Lord Euſton, Son to the Duke of Grafton, who is come hither.

Hague, July 28. N. S. They write from Bruſſels, that as ſoon as the Archdutcheſs Governeſs had received from Carelsbad, the Emperor's Order for reſtoring the Zealand Ship lately arreſted at Oſtend, her moſt Serene Highneſs ordered Mr. Nenny, Secretary at War, to write the following Letter to Mynheer Aſſendelft, Reſident of the States-General, viz.

SIR,

It is by Order of her Highneſs the moſt Serene Governeſs, that I do myſelf the Honour to let you know, Sir, that his Imperial and Catholick Majeſty being ready to give their High-Mightineſſes Marks of his Friendſhip for the Republick, and of his Deſire to live in a good Intelligence with them, has reſolved to grant a Replevy of the Seizure made in the Port of Oſtend, of the Brigantine named the Adventurer, and of the Merchandizes and other Effects of her Cargo, at the Requeſt of John de Schonamille; and that in Purſuance of his Majeſty's Royal Inſtructions upon that Subject, her moſt Serene Highneſs has already ordered the ſaid Seizure to be replevied, having ſent her Directions for that Purpoſe both to the Governor of Oſtend, and to the chief Judge of his Majeſty's Admiralty eſtabliſhed there, who are enjoined by her moſt Serene Highneſs's Diſpatches, to acquaint the Perſon who has the Command of the ſaid Ship, that he may quit that Port with his Brigantine with all Freedom, and purſue his Voyage with his Ship and all the Merchandizes and Effects of her Cargo; the Whole without any Demand upon the Score of Charges, under any Pretence whatſoever. Whereof you are deſired, Sir, on the Part of the ſaid auguſt Princeſs, to inform their High-Mightineſſes as ſoon as conveniently you can, and to repreſent to them on this Occaſion, that his Majeſty has reſolved to cauſe proper Inſtances to be made to them, to procure Schonamille Satisfaction for the Loſſes he has ſuſtained by the unwarrantable Enterprize of the Weſt-India Company of Holland, in taking from him, and confiſcating in 1718, his Ship named the Marquiſs de Prie, with all the Merchandizes and other Effects of her Cargo; and that his Majeſty has the greater Reaſon to promiſe himſelf the Juſtice and Friendſhip of the States-General upon this Occaſion, becauſe he has taken all Opportunities, as well as the preſent, to do every Thing that is agreeable to their High-Mightineſſes; his Majeſty being perſuaded, that the Conferences formerly holden about the Satisfaction due to the ſaid Schonamille, were broke off before they could be brought to an amicable Iſſue, only by the Differences which happened about that Time between his Majeſty and the Republick, which are now happily terminated, and adjuſted to their mutual Satisfaction. I have the Honour to be, with a perfect Devotion,

SIR,
Your moſt humble
And moſt obedient Servant,

Bruſſels, the 16th of July, 1732. P. MAC NENNY.

We have Advices from the Rhine, which ſay, the French are marching Troops into Alſace, which very much diſturbs the King of Pruſſia, and thoſe who take Part with him in the Succeſſion to Berg and Juliers, France having guaranty'd the ſame to his Serene Highneſs the Prince of Sultzbach.
